THE GENERAL INTENTION

Recommended by His Holiness, Plus X.

Pius X.

October is the beginning of the book reason; it is for the press what the harvest is for the farmer. Do we realize the importance of the press? In 1842. M. Cremieux addressed these memorable words to the Masonic lodges: "Think nothing of money, of position, of popularity; the press is verything; buy the press, and you will be masters of public opinion, you will rule the land." Business men, too, know the importance of the press; if they invest thousands and even millions of dollars in advertising, they know it is but broad cast upon the running waters, which will return to them with interest. The effect of the press is not test in our moral and religious life than in our political and commercial schemes. our political and commercial schemes. There are books that have produced more Saints than they contain letters, and there are publications that have ruined the faith and purity of willions of saints. of millions of souls. It is true that we profess to practice the apostleship we profess to practice the apostleship of prayer, but let us not forget that the apostleship of the press is not less real. The one is interior, the other exterior, but the one must be coupled with the other in order to produce its adequate effects. It has been said that St. Paul would become a journalist, if he were to exercise his apostolic maniatry in our days. To christianize the press, to prepagate good reading is press, to propagate good reading, is equivalent to the exercise of a St. Paul's own work of zeal. Bad books, bamphiers, reviews and papers must be reduced in every possible way. It is not necessary that we should buy more reading matter than we have been accustomed to do; but it is necessary that we should buy better books and magazines than have done hitherto. We need not increase our reading time, but we must improve our reading matter. Tell me what you read, and I shall tell you what you are.

From the home to the church a number of the newspaper men of the city, representing the different papers, formed a guard of honor to the hearse. The pall-bearers were selected from the Elks, J. L. Dobell and W. E. Elisworth representing the Miner, John J. Hammill and Charles Copenharve the Standard, and Thomas S. Kilgalian and James Canning the Elks.

Rev. L. J. Goulette has gone to resume his work at St. Viateur's college, at Bourbonnais, Ill. Father Goulette came to Butte in May to organize a boys' choir for the Sacred Heart church and to instruct them in the Gregorian music. He expected to stay until December, and to close his work with a grand concert, but cwing to the death of Rev. Father Callaghan the plans were abandoned.

The funeral of Annie Tripp took place from the family residence, 412
East Park street, Monday morning at 10 o'clock, proceeding to the Sacred Heart church, where a high mass of requiem was celebrated The attendance at the church and funeral was very large and the service of a most impressive character. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The deceased, who was 12 years of age, was a pupil of Father Callahan's school and an especial favorite of the deceased clergyman. She died a couple of days after the clergyman, unaware that the latter had passed away, it not being deemed advisable to tell her of Father Callahan's death.
